

In this issue

Issue 218 Winter 2023

86

Compass

9 Editorial

Reports of the death of printed media are not so much as exaggerated as plain wrong—at least as far as carpet and textile books are concerned

20 Dialogue

'China's Southern Paradise: Treasures from the Lower Yangzi Delta' at The Cleveland Museum of Art; 'Africa in Focus' at The Met; 'Choice and Precious Work: Treasures from the Schoolroom' at Witney Antiques; HALI Tours return in 2024; Tom Hickman at Robert Young Antiques; new gallery in Berlin

22 Diary

HALI's recommendations for the quarter

25 Calendar

The listings page for carpet- and textile-related auctions, exhibitions and events

26 Thread of time

Rachel Meek
The translation, industrialisation and ownership of rug and textile patterns

28 Travellers' tales

Malin Lonnberg
A conference and the opening of a new carpet-weaving centre in Bukhara

34 Profile

Lucy Upward
'CulturalxCollabs. Weaving The Future' sees antique and contemporary rug making unite

39 Comment

Jean Hoffman
Are webinars the lynchpin of future communication for rug enthusiasts?

40 Anatomy of an object

Joan Hart
A Kashmir shawl that once belonged to Queen Victoria perfectly unites the Victorian love of pattern and colour with the Kashmir master weavers' eye for detail

42 Common thread

A selection of books containing, or concerning, textiles, their use, circulation and creation

Features

46 Beneath the covers

Rosemary Crill
Cloth used in the bindings of Armenian and Ethiopian manuscripts from the 14th–20th centuries

56 By the book

Eight specialists discuss a 'book' that they consider to be exceptional

66 Close encounters

Victoria Finlay
A sample book from 1787 contains precious barkcloth variations recording vanished cultures

72 The most important and flawed carpet book you've probably never read

Steven Cohen
On the fascinating, frustrating and fabulous 1905 book, T. H. Hendley's Asian Carpets

80 The story of a book

Ariane Fennetaux and John Styles
An 18th-century volume of cloth samples tells of rivalry, espionage and fierce ambition

46

20

132

Marketplace

86 Hanging by a thread

Nicoletta Fazio

A current exhibition at the Museum of Islamic Art in Qatar uses textiles to tell the story of Iran during the transformative reign of Shah Abbas

96 Back to Baluch roots

Markus Voigt

A new book on Baluch flatweaves casts light on a neglected area of collection and study

102 Curtain up

Ben Evans

October saw the much-anticipated opening of the new museum in Brescia devoted to the Zaleski collection. The institution has inspirational aims

108 Textile portraits: from Kashmir to the Qajar court

Cosima Stewart

An international round table coincided with an exhibition of Qajar paintings at the Simon Janashia Museum of Georgia, Tbilisi

114 Within the gift of the Shah

Irina Koshoridze

Two Persian robes in the Georgian National Museum belonged to one of 'the most heroic and tragic figures in Georgian history'

118 Here be dragons

Isabel Pifien Chueh and Sarah Spotowski

A foretaste of an important new exhibition opening at the University of Alberta

Reviews

128 Book reviews

Pull of the Thread: Textile Travels of a Generation by Sheila Fruman, reviewed by Hadi Maktabi; Art Underfoot: The Nazmiyal Collection by Jason Nazmiyal, Elisabeth Parker and Markus Voigt, reviewed by Judith Glass

132 Exhibition reviews

'Burma to Myanmar', British Museum, London, reviewed by Jonathan Hope; 'Raphael: Gold and Silk', Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna, reviewed by Christian Erber; 'The Resistance of Pen and Paper', Richard Saltoun Gallery, London

140 Exhibitions

'Paracas: An Exhibit of Textiles and Ceramics' at David Bernstein Fine Art, New York

142 Auction reports

Stephanie Douglas on tapestries, carpets and textiles from the Galerie Chevalier collection at Giquello, Paris; Daniel Shaffer on Modernist carpets and rugs designed by Ivan da Silva Bruhns for the Maharaja of Indore at Christie's, Paris

150 Auction Price Guide

International auction results of note

160 Last page

A glorious installation in Brescia of prayer rugs from the Zaleski collection

